ARETHA FRANKLIN

Put aside her 75 million records sold; 18 GRAMMY awards won; being the first woman inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame; and distinguished as the “greatest singer of all time” by Rolling Stone Magazine. For Soul music legend Aretha Franklin, there is something more valuable than praise and popularity, something she has earned throughout her extraordinary life and career: “R-E-S-P-E-C-T.”

Aretha Louise Franklin was born on March 25, 1942 in Memphis, Tennessee. At the age of four she moved with her family to Detroit, Michigan, where her father became pastor at New Bethel Baptist Church.

Following Sunday church services, the Franklin family home became a popular gathering place for notable figures in the African American community, including some of the most famous musicians of the day. From Gospel stars like Mahalia Jackson and Clara Ward singing hymns through her hallways, to Jazz giants like Art Tatum and Oscar Peterson jamming on her living room piano, visitors exposed Aretha to both sacred and secular music growing up.

Inspired by her father’s musical style of preaching, she learned to play piano and joined the New Bethel youth choir at an early age. Developing her musical talents in church and on the road with her father’s “Gospel Caravan” tours, she moved to New York City at the age of 18 to pursue a recording career.

Starting out at Columbia Records, she recorded nine albums on the label, though none produced any major hits. It wasn’t until she signed with Atlantic Records in 1967 that her artistry was fully recognized.

The popularity of her Atlantic recordings not only made “Aretha” a household name, they impacted important social change. Her cover of Otis Redding’s “Respect” for example, became an anthem of the Civil

“SHE’S HOME”

June 1971: The Apollo was buzzing with excitement as fans lined up to see the “Queen of Soul” perform. The glow from the Apollo’s marquee lit up 125th Street reading: “She’s Home: Aretha Franklin.” Backed by saxophonist King Curtis and The Kingpins, Aretha’s soul-infused performances drove fans to near hysteria. Although she has performed on the Apollo stage many times over the course of her career, her 1971 performances made music history and a homecoming like none other.

Rights movement, and has since empowered countless women in their own efforts to gain equal rights. Aretha's live performances influenced further change, including her emotional rendition of "Precious Lord" at the memorial service for Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

With her career skyrocketing, she ventured into the movie industry in the 1970s and 80s. Recording the soundtrack to the movie Sparkle in 1976, she went on to make her acting debut in the 1980 musical comedy, The Blues Brothers. Performing her smash hit "Think", her Blues Brothers appearance delighted audiences and introduced new generations to her artistry.

Half a century after being crowned the "Queen of Soul," Aretha Franklin continues to perform to this day. A living legend of Soul music and American culture, her legacy will live on to impact the future of music for generations to come. She was inducted into the Apollo Theater Walk of Fame in 2010.
